NFL Matchup: A detailed breakdown of the key stats and factors that will influence the game's outcome including Rank & Yardage Variance,

As mentioned, our DraftKings, and FanDuel strategy includes looking at the Rank Variance of each phase of the game for that offense and defense.

This week's NFL opening day matchup shows that the following:

Detroit Offense vs. Kansas City Defense: the advantage that the Lions have is a 17 point rank advantage in the receiving game, which translates to an 8 point rank advantage in the passing game. Now, you have to look at the draft class for the Chiefs as their draft class for 2023 and players coming in include several defensive players.

The Kansas City Chiefs Offense Vs. the Detroit Lions Defense: The Chiefs have a lot of advantage areas vs the Lions defense. In the Pass phase of the game, they have an 11 point Rank Variance advantage, a 10 point in the Run game, a 29 point in the Receiving phase of the game.

The rank variances in the Pass and Receiving phase of the game is why we think this game will be a high scoring game.

Game Predictions: Gain an edge with our reliable predictions on player performances, scores, and potential game-changers.

Vegas odds have this game at a total points of 54 and our data model predicts a 50 point game.

We expect this game to be a shootout - even though the Chiefs have drafted defensive players, it'll still be a shootout.

Fantasy Football Points Predictions: We provide valuable predictions for players in Point-Per-Reception (PPR) leagues, helping you strategize and optimize your fantasy football lineups based on their expected receptions.

Our daily fantasy football model shows a high scoring game with both QB's scoring a high FFP. For Mr. Mahomes we predict 21 fantasy football points (FFP) and that does not include this typical run yardage (14.63% usage in the run game). For Mr. Goff, we show a whopping 33 FFP, but remember this shows the old Chiefs Defense and a 6% run usage %.

Travis will be his typical menace to a defense, look out for Detroit's new TE, Sam LaPorta to have a decent outing as he is ultimately replacing TJ Hockerson.

Rashee Rice the Chief's rookie WR should have a decent outing and we predict a 17.50% usage or better as he is replacing Juju Smith Shuster.

Jahmyr Gibbs and David Montgomery should have great usage as they are replacing Jamaal Williams who had a 54.4% usage percentage in the run game and 3.16% in the receiving game and D'Andre Swift who had a 20.63% usage in the Run game and 12.63% in the receiving game.

Self-Proclaimed Expert Game Analysis: Our team of experts dissects player performances and team dynamics for strategic gameplay.

We will try our best and not be your typical Monday Morning QB, so we will put our predictions and game expectations right here for all to see and for us to refer back to once the game is over.

Now, the opening game of the season is tricky, there are players coming in, you have to account for those that either retired or left for another team and then of course are the rookies. Some of these rookies will replace players that have left and will make an impact right away, but then there are others that will be backups and will need further development equating to one or two or maybe a low usage percentage of less than 5%.

Even though the Chiefs have made great stride in drafting and signing up defensive players, we still are predicting a shootout - Mr. Mahomes and Mr. Goff are competitors, talented and play to win.

The running game is predicted to be minimal. Our stats (remember we use the average method) predictions show that the Chiefs can get 118 run yards and the Lions just 87 run yards.

The receiving game phase predictions show a whopping 300+ yards for the Lions and 236+ for the Chiefs - we know, we know - how is that possible. Look at the rank variance and see for yourself.

Scoring, you saw the Vegas odds, the Chiefs are favorites, but it'll be a close one - Total 4 TD's for the Lions -1 in the run game and 3 for the Chiefs. Game score predictions - Lions 52.25 - Chiefs 32.0

Good Luck on your Daily Fantasy Football contest and remember no matter if you play on DraftKings or FanDuel or any other Daily Fantasy Football platform, we have stats, analysis and predictions that are specific to DFS.
